1. A new political party, sponsored by President RHEE, was being planned in the Republic of Korea in early June 1951 as the "Labor Party." Under the control of CHUN Chin-han, former Minister of Labor, it was to be organized by the Greater Korea Labor League. This group controls over 30,000 stevedores at the Pusan docks who are organized into the Pusan Docks Labor Union.
2. The Labor Union handles relations between the stevedores and agencies using the docks, such as the U.S. Army, the ROK Office of Supply, and foreign shipping firms. The Union collects payments from these agencies and then pays the stevedores; there is reportedly a considerable difference between the amounts collected and the amounts paid out. The profits from the Pusan Docks Labor Union, which are turned over to the Greater Korea Labor League, are estimated at over 200 million won a month. This sum is divided into three parts and allocated to CHUN Chin-han, KIM Tae-son, and YI Sung-chu; through them it is partly passed to others, as, for example, secretaries in President RHEE'S office and KIM Kwang-sop, who is doing undercover work for KIM Tae-son.
3. The Pusan Docks Labor Union is more or less subsidiary to the Korea Forwarding Company, which is under the control of HO Chong. Through him, the new party, if it materializes, will be connected with such big businessmen as YI Nan-un, CH'OE Sun-chu, KIM Yong-chu, and HONG Sung-ha. It is conjectured by members of the government that the new party is intended for the use of these persons, who are in the Democratic Nationalist Party but would like to oppose it, and that RHEE will be unable to bend it to his own uses.
4. The stevedores receive their wages through the Korea Forwarding Company, at the following rates:

5. The labor hotels are at Pusanchin and Akasaki Pier, operating under the U.S. Second Logistical Command. They collect 237 won per person per meal, for which they use rationed rice at 134 won for two hap. Stevedores not living in the labor hotels pay 80 won instead of 20 won a day for a mutual aid fee to the Pusan Port Transportation Welfare Association. All stevedores pay the 20 won daily membership fee for the Greater Korea Labor League.
